“ He was my " Uncle Floyd " and I only have several memories of him from before he and Janet got married in 1967. Though I grew-up physically always far away from him and an outsider, I felt his presence through my mother who treasured him. To me he was the soft-spoken and gentle (always smiling and pleasant), very wonderful Uncle who was my mother's little brother. Even as a child I could tell that he was quite skillful as a mechanic and a musician too, I believe. I just found-out today of his passing, so I went online to see his obituary which I am grateful for. It gives me closure, but leaves a hole in a long line of holes, all the biological Uncles and Aunts that I had, who have now passed away. Aunt Dot, his little sister, now stands alone.

I mainly knew Floyd through my mother who told me what it was like being his oldest sister back when they were growing up on the farm. (Something about rat poison that Floyd and Dot ate while up in the hay loft. My grandmother got to them in time and remedied the situation)! Floyd was number six of seven kids in my grandparents' family. I always kept them all straight in my mind and they each will always have a special place in my heart. The last time my mom and Floyd were visiting together in So. Calif., Floyd did something so special for her that she told me. While at an outside Hispanic bazaar, my mother commented on something that she liked. He made some excuse and reason to go back by himself to the bazaar after they all had left. He went back in and purchased the item as a surprise for my mom's birthday, which he gave to her.

Thanks to Janet and the family, for being such a stable and large part of Uncle Floyd's life after 1967. I remember how much greater/happier he seemed, because of having all of you whom he loved and cared about. ----Kelly Blake
