“ Janet, I know that it is difficult to lose a parent. The best way to honor and remember him is to share all of your memories of him with your family, especially your children. It will keep him alive in their minds and yours for the years to come and they'll be able to share those stories with their children, passing on his legacy. My nephews still tell "Oma" stories as if they had grown up with my Mom there beside them. My heart and prayers are with you and your family. - Doris Clark
